

DOG SLED EXPEDITION IN THE LAND OF THE LAST INUIT

Dogsled expedition on the East coast of Greenland with local guides, descendants of the last Inuit contacted by the white man

Travel on the ice sea by dogsled in the traditional way with Inuit guides. Route among huge icebergs trapped in the frozen sea in one of the few places in the world where dogsled still is used as main way of transportation. Visit tiny and remote Inuit villages in the area of Ammassalik where were contacted the last Inuit (Eskimo) by the white man.

We might have the opportunity to see Polar Bears. More than 200 km of route through towering glaciers, ice sea in constant motion and steeply mountains where is possible watching seals, arctic hares and other polar wildlife. The route runs along the Denmark Strait nearby the ice floes area where polar bears move and hunt.
